The Rising River

Following a recent field trip to Our Lady of Lourdes Church to hear about residential schools, students from Jody Bonner-Vickers' grade 8 class at J. W. Walker School were inspired to stop and help out with the sandbagging efforts taking place at Rusty Myers. Pictured here is Colton Brown hoisting a sand bag.

Brayden Clink helped load a half ton with sand bags.

Lillie Mackinnon and Jacob Gustafson work together to fill sand bags at Rusty Myers.

A lot of strange things have floated down the river in the last two weeks but a freezer? That was a surprise!

By: Teresa Hazel

The rain may have stopped but that didn't stop the river from continuing to rise last week, prompting an urgent call for volunteers to help with sandbagging efforts along the waterway across the Rainy River district and International Falls.

Volunteers answered the call and enough sandbags have now been put in place to protect the priority areas identified.

Couchiching First Nation received additional help to sandbag and protect homes as crews from the Ministry of Natural Resources were also sent in to assist. More extensive construction work is being done to protect the cemetery located on Couchiching First Nation.

Meanwhile, in International

Falls, volunteers were assisted by the National Guard who came in to lend a hand.

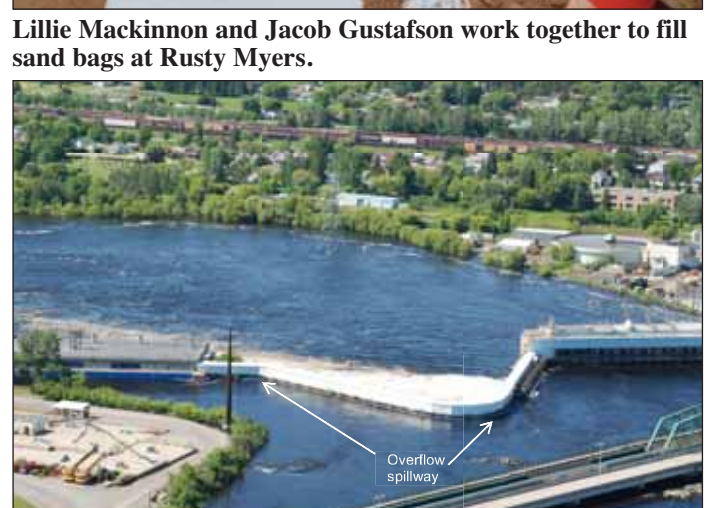

In the most recent emergency update from the Town of Fort Frances, Patrick Briere, Public Information Officer was appreciative of the community efforts.

"We would like to thank everyone who came out and volunteered their time to assist in ensuring our community is protected. Because of the unbelievable turnout of volunteers all of the priority areas that needed to be sandbagged have been completed. We have also been able to create a stockpile of sandbags, which will be available to us should the need arise".

The press release went on to update about closures in the area, which now includes the 5 Mile Dock located on Couch-

This spillway is designed to safely pass additional flow at high lake levels.

A broad view of the spillway shows the lay of the land in Fort Frances where the Rainy River begins.

ching First Nation.

"The 5 Mile Dock is submerged underwater and appears to have sustained some damage, because of these observations we have been advised to tell the public that the 5 Mile Dock has been closed until further notice", reported Briere.

Although the water levels of the Rainy Lake and Upper River are continuing to rise, the update noted that the increase is at a much slower rate than anticipated. The weather has played an important role in this slowdown.

The International Rainy Lake - Lake of the Woods Watershed Board also updated conditions in a press release dated June 23, 2014:

"Rainy Lake water level is forecast to rise roughly 10-15 centimetres over the next 7 days. Meteorological forecasts suggest the possibility of more rainfall in 6 - 7 days, which could have the lake rising again given the saturated conditions". The Board asks waterfront property owners and uses of the system to keep themselves updated on basin conditions. Up-to-date information can be found on www.ijc.org or by calling 1-800-661-5922 Ext. 3.

Residents are also encouraged to be mindful of the Town's Operations and Facilities crews that are continuing to work to repair all of the damages that have occurred on the roadways and infrastructure.

"We would like to continue to remind the public to use caution when approaching any work areas. This will ensure everyone's safety", said Briere.

The public is also urged to use caution when out enjoying the water.

"There is still a large amount of debris in the lake and the water level at the CN train bridge is very high", cautioned Briere.

Fort Frances and area residents can monitor the emergency by following 93.1 The Border for updates or can call the Emergency Information Line at 807.274-1818.

It's a real gas... at last!

We have gas! Paul Caruso at the pumps of Busy Beaver Fuels at 612 Atwood Ave in Rainy River. Paul and his wife Riitta recently purchased the former Cardinal Blue Wave Station from the Marmus family. As well as a full service fuel station Busy Beaver Fuels will offer a carwash, general store with convenience items, tackle, hunting & fishing licences, a coffee bar, animal and pet care products, plus local crafts and products. The station will be open Mon Fri- 7 to 7, Sat. 8-5, and perhaps a Sunday shift will be added. This is the second business the couple has opened in Rainy River- the first A 1 Sewing & Upholstery Service.

After more than a year, Rainy River once again has a service station to provide gasoline and diesel to the public. The former Blue Wave outlet officially changed hands when the Marmus Family turned the ownership of the station at 612 Atwood Ave over to Paul and Riitta (nee Johnson) Caruso.

Caruso was a millwright for 39 years in the mines of Elliot Lake and Sudbury. As a student in high school he managed a service station in his home town of North Bay for a year and a half. Paul moved with his wife Riitta to Rainy River where they built their retirement home on River Ave E. This is the second business they have opened in the Rainy River, the first A 1 Sewing & Upholstery Service.

The service station will be known as Busy Beaver Fuels and as well as a full service gas station will include reopening of the Car Wash, both services sadly missed in the community. Other goods and services to be offered at Busy Beaver Fuels initially will be bait and tackle, hunting and fishing licences and a general store that will offer convenience items, confections, animal and pet supplies, local crafts and products, and perhaps a coffee bar. Future items and services will be added as needs and markets are identified.

Initially Busy Beaver Fuels will be open Monday thru Friday, 7:00 am to 7:00 pm, Saturdays 8:00 am to 5:00 pm and possibly a Sunday shift as well.

Congratulations to Paul and Riitta for their initiative and entrepreneurial spirit. We wish them well!

I was hoping that I didn't have to write about the weather this week but it is difficult not to. Emo was hit with a horrible hail storm. I heard about it Saturday night and was crossing my fingers it missed the Research Station. It didn't. All our crops are showing damage. Some soybeans have had their leaves stripped off completely along with alfalfa. We just finished planting our vegetable plots last week and the cucumbers are just stems as well. Many have asked "what will happen?" I have no idea - other than even if there is recovery - it will affect yield. I am also not sure how wide-spread the hail was - but I am certain it will have affected some farms. Our weather station was completely destroyed. We have experienced hail in the past but have never seen damage like this. I certainly was wishing for a better year. We have projects that have income attached and as well it would be nice to have some great data to pass along in hopes we will remain open! I realize we have no control over our situation but it is certainly hard not to let it bother you!

Relay for Life on Friday night in Fort Frances was unfortunately affected by the weather as well and everyone was forced inside. Walking inside the school isn't nearly as fun as walking outside. I haven't heard yet how much was raised but there was a lot of great team spirit and fundraising activities. Our team "The Foundation Fighters" had a great time - though I left for home before midnight and I am sure there was more fun to be had. I left because I was scheduled to sell the Foundation Canada Cash Day Lottery Tickets at the Farmers Market on Saturday. If you haven't purchased your ticket yet - be sure to get one! Time is running out. $10 000 is the First Prize, followed by $2000, $1000 and 4 chances at $500. All the proceeds stay local and are put towards projects at all our Health Care Facilities across the District. And if you haven't made it to Clover Valley Farmer's Market this year - you are really missing out! They have all kinds of great things going on. The $5.00 all you can eat Waffle Bar - is worth a visit. They have some great new products - most are products grown / made in Ontario. The baking, produce and meat are mouth-watering. If you are a Face Book user - be sure to check for their updates and products that are posted regularly. Mark it on your list - it's worth it. I always joke that Maddie and Marlee can go anywhere and find stuff to buy - but I came home with quite a truck load myself this time!

Maddie and Marlee came home with me after the morning at the Farmers Market. We rushed around to attend the Rainy River Stewardship Committee Summer Wind-Up at the home of Rick and Linda Neilson's. We started our celebration with a trail walk that we had to cut short because both girls ended up with terrible blisters on their feet. It might have been a good thing since the rest of the crew ended up getting caught in a terrible downpour. Once again the rain just had to make an appearance. We ended out party with a great potluck meal and a nice visit with a great group of people.

Sunday we just took the time to play all day. We caught minnows, tad-poles, frogs and picked wild flowers. What else can you do with the conditions we have been dealt? We checked electric fences and of course - got caught in a rain shower. First thing Maddie asked when she woke up Sunday morning - "Can we stay another night?" She said "when is your summer break Auntie Kimmie?" They have busy schedules for the next while so they had to make their way back to town but not without frogs, tad poles, wild flowers and a lot of dirt!

From the house submitted by John Rafferty M.P.

Your right to personal privacy is under direct attack by your democratically elected government. The attack is coming on many fronts, very quickly, and may prove irreversible if we aren't able to stop it before it fully takes hold.

Section 8 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms guarantees that; "Everyone has the right to be secure against unreasonable search or seizure." In other words, we have a right to privacy and that right is protected under the Charter. This doesn't seem to bother the current government though. We've been debating a raft of new Conservative bills in Ottawa that aim to do many things, but one thing they all seem intent upon doing is violate your right to privacy.

Bill C-13, the anti-cyberbullying bill is the most obvious example and one that I've written about in this space before. While New Democrats and all parties in parliament support many measures in C-13 we reject the provisions that allow the federal government to access your internet viewing habits without a warrant. You read that correctly. The Conservative government wants to the ability to sift through the internet history of Canadians without a warrant or cause, and they are pursuing this power under the guise of protecting our children.

But it gets worse. C-13 would also allow "public officers" as well as "peace officers" to access your data. What that means is that the Conservatives not only want police officers to be able to search through your browser history, but also Canada Revenue tax agents, local reeves, justices of the peace, CSIS agents and even mayors. I'm sure they are all fine upstanding citizens, but I don't think anyone holding the above offices should be able to search your browser history, chat room conversations, and social media profiles without a warrant or cause. Could you imagine Rob Ford being able to call up someone's internet history and emails from his mayor's chair at 2 a.m. after a party?

If you think your internet service provider could help protect you from this, then you are wrong again. Another Conservative bill, S-4 the Digital Privacy Act (incredibly named since it seeks to eliminate your privacy) which was introduced in the Senate (hence the S instead of the C at the start), was meant to crack down on internet piracy of content; the downloading of music, movies, computer programs, and other content without the permission of the owner of that content. Unfortunately, as with C-13, the devil is in the details.

Somewhere in the middle of S-4 is text will allow companies to trade your personal information and service history and allow authorities to, again, sift through your personal information without a warrant.

So private companies like Bell, Shaw, and Rogers will be allowed to trade your personal information with other companies like HBO, Time Warner, or Sony if they think you've violated your service agreement or suspect fraud. Police will also be able to call up your internet provider and access your data without a warrant and without your knowledge. Ironically, if C-13 passes, those companies will also receive immunity from prosecution for leaking your personal information to whomever they want and whenever they want.

Whether they are striking agreements with the US government to share our border travel information and tax information with the IRS, or bringing forth a cyberbullying bill that is a Trojan horse for warrantless tapping of our internet activity, or an anti-piracy bill that let's corporation own our information and give it away to the police and other companies, the Harper Conservatives have become a democratic government run amok. They are trampling on our basic Charter rights and doing everything they can to end personal privacy in our country.

This will be a long and tough battle to defend, protect, and enhance your personal privacy but you can be sure that Canada's New Democrats will fight for your rights and against this out of control Conservative government every step of the way.

Legion Chat by Walter Wagner, Major Hughes Br. 54 president

Today it is with sadness we drape our charter with black bunting to mark the passing of Manny Nordin. Manny was a staunch supporter of Branch #54 with attendance almost every day. He took part in our parades, he was also a former president, a ballplayer and a member for almost sixty years. We already miss you Manny.

Speaking of long term history we found a Canadian Ensign signed by the Rainy River boys of the 52nd Battalion overseas force and was sent to Miss Blanche Easton. It also has printed on it For Our King and Canada We Will Do Our Best. How is that for a seventy year piece of history? It is hanging in our memory corner.

If anyone is interested in putting a float in the Railroad Daze parade please let Walter know. Let's get out and make Rainy Rivers' 110th birthday special.

A paper mill opened, the Salvation Army came to Town and the Dominion Bank opened its doors all in the year 1914.

Now, 100 years later, the mill is closed down, the Salvation Army is still here and so is the TD Canada Trust.

"I think it's a pretty big deal to be around that long supporting the community", said Eric Blondin, who is the current Bank Manager. He succeeds a long line of bank managers from C.M. Denison who opened the first branch back in 1914.

"We've been through the ups and downs of the community. We've supported the community and the community has supported us", said an appreciative Blondin.

An anniversary celebration is set for this Friday, June 27 from 12:00 – 3:00 p.m. and the public is invited to the corner of Scott and Mowat where the bank has stood since 1922. The original building that was opened in 1914 was located further down the street at 232 Scott Street.

In 1977, a new building was erected on the current site and a grand re-opening was held where over 200 guests attended. The bank manager was J.J. Donovan and the Mayor of Fort Frances was Allan Avis. The opening of the new building was seen as a symbol of a growing community by the speakers who participated in the ribbon cutting ceremony at the time. The first Green Machine was installed in August 1988. Then in 2000, Toronto-Dominion bank merged with Canada Trust and has since been recognized as TD Canada Trust.

"We're inviting all of our past, current and future clients to join us", said Blondin who was pleased to be in the manager position to mark this occasion.

"It's pretty special", he smiled.

"We will have some retired employees coming to help out", enthused Blondin about the day's events adding that past managers have also been invited to attend.

The activities will include a BBQ lunch with hot dogs and hamburgers, refreshments and cake. There will also be prizes and giveaways.

District Vice-President, Stephen Inskip from Ottawa will be in attendance to celebrate and assist with a couple of planned donations to local charities.

"We welcome everyone down on Friday to help celebrate this significant milestone", said Blondin.
